I can hardly believe that the aristocracy of England have so lost their head, as to convict the Queen, who appears to be a cold and sensible woman: she may have been guilty of some misconduct or indiscretions; but hing an unprotected & abused female & certainly less vicious, than the King & most of his Ministers, hing monsters of an age, when it is impossible to impose a spurious issue upon the nation, which alone could [illegible] the proposed measures, if fully proved to be strictly just, I think [illegible] of degradation upon evidence which is insufficient to convict a suspected Dog.

The affairs of England & of Europe generally except Russia are in my opinion, approaching to a serious crisis.

I wish to tell George that I love him & his sister dearly & that I hope he will not forget me, but come in the Spring & go to School again with love to Louisa, I remain affect[ionate] yours

Eliz. Wetherell

P.S. My Brother has been afflicted with the loss of a little Child (Charles Frederick) who lived only a few hours after falling into a Kettle of hot water.

Love

Ellen Gibbs.