Dear Daughter 1825

I have heard nothing direct from you since I left you at Newyork. I wrote a hasty letter by Maria Woodworth who has gone to live at Brooklyn, & sent by her eight pair of Braid Cloth, which I thought would answer for floating for George &c. I presume they arrived safely.

We are well as usual; Oliver has recovered & if he is prudent hereafter, will suffer no irremediable injury. The Boy throws & talks constantly.

Mrs Conard & James left us last Week; James will return next Month to his School, at Middletown.

I should like much to see George, when he returns to his School; cannot he come by the Stage this way, without too much extra fatigue & expence?

The hard Maple trees, bore no seeds this year, in consequence of the drought. I am sorry for this on Mr Gibbs account. We could send trees, but they can be got nearer, if any person would place after on board of some Boat, bound to New York.

Write soon, and will thank you
