Boston March 15. 1833.

Dear Sir

My peach trees suffered very much the last year, and many of them have died. Most of my neighbours sustained the same injury, and it was so extensive that I am apprehensive of obtaining any in the part of the Country, that is free from the disease, and think it most advisable and safest to procure some from New York, and the only difficulty is the trouble I must give to some one of my friends to make a selection for me. Having been disappointed both in the trees and fruit by sending directly to the seller or gardner, I am unwilling to make another trial, for it is loss of time and expence. Shall I ask too great a favor of you, either to go personally, or send your trusty gardner, to your best seller of trees, Princes, Bloodgood, Parmentier or any other and select for me twenty five of the best peach trees, grafted with the most approved fruit. I should prefer a few to be very early, and the residue to come ripe
