depth, but we did not descend more than 300 feet in consequence of the want of time, and the great labour of climbing up and climbing down so many ladders. We were equipped in miners dresses with lamps & a guide and saw everything which was worth notice. Tired enough we were when we came up. There is a curious old church at Freyberg but not much else that is interesting. We visited also the collection of models of mining machinery &c. I expect to leave this city about the middle of next week in the steamer for Prague to spend a week there and then to take the railroad for Vienna. I have a letter to Dr Stout if he is indeed still there.
