Boston April 19. 1833.

Dr Sir

Yours of the 13th I duly received, and upon the same day the peach trees arrived, for which I have to accept my best acknowledgments. The trees were well [illegible] and of good size; and I wish Mr Wilson had been as attentive in bestowing proper care in putting them up as in the selection of the trees and scions. In that I am very much disappointed. The roots were simply covered over with dry straw, a very improper covering, and when they arrived with only five days passage they were much wilted, and very dry. They were immediately taken by the foreman and inserted in the ground heads, and covered over with earth, but I doubt if they will recover. I shall however try some of the best of them, and the rest put into a nursery and endeavour to restore them. I think they came out in worse order, than any I have received from abroad. Subsequently to my writing you I wrote to Mr Pomeroy of Philadelphia to procure some peach trees there. He purchased some of Landreth, which were put up and arrived in excellent order. They had straw covering than straw. I should have written
