and the greater part of our passengers who as Baier remarked were "lauter Berliner Philister" because frequently exceedingly seasick notwithstanding the fineness of the water. The waves broke over our boat in very respectable style and breakfast commenced with by the board.
I was not sick as luck would have it and enjoyed the trip much. Ltd Pekesdale along the Island of Usedom for many miles passing Caserow and the Stuckelberg where the steamer stopped for a half hour. We reached Pillnitz about 1 o'clock and got a good room with a clean view. Pillnitz is the seat of the princess of Pillnitz who has extensive estates on the islands.
It is a clean little village with white newly painted houses and quite resembles one of our own country towns. There is also a very fine park belonging to the palace and we spent the afternoon in walking about and enjoying the fresh air and fine views. The Island of Rügen must resemble Rhodadale [illegible]

Baier found here his brother and sister waiting for him and we received an invitation to join a family party at the house of one of his uncles on the next Thursday. This of course was accepted of course. I was anxious to see something of German life in the country. Yesterday we [illegible] Lt Lachmund [illegible] part of Pomerania like Rügen. Next morning (Wednesday) we set off to visit [illegible] Lachmund's a distance of about [illegible] miles. We made our journey on foot and did some very good walking indeed considering that we were just from the laboratory. For nearly half of all the way we had a splendid view of the Island of Rügen. Midway we passed through a village and a little further on we reached the ferry which took us across the Strelasund. The Strelasund is a narrow arm of the sea which separates the Island of Rügen from the mainland. The Rügen peasants are like all the Island folk of North Germany quite a different race from the people on the mainland. The Rügenpeasants are distinguished by a short dress and by a broader display of leg than is usual with the fair sex. The men wear enormous boots which reach nearly to the knee and long stockings. The women wear a bodice laced in front like some of the Swiss female costumes and carry on their heads a sort of cap plaited almost exactly like a sugar loaf cover and fringed at the border with a broad piece of fine lace. They are very shy of strangers but are the honest and simple minded folk you ever met with. We had a splendid dinner at the Gasthof and [illegible] Lachmund's uncle. [illegible] Lachmund's uncle is a large landowner and has a fine house where a large company was engaged in dancing when we arrived. The day being a festival all over Germany - the Pfingst Correspondenz to our Whitsunday - Miss waltzed with great energy [illegible] o'clock in the day, the ladies being led out by [illegible]