is covered by a species of helmet made of cedar bark, bear grass and leather, and is also impenetrable by arrows. The neck therefore, is the only vital part of the body exposed to danger in action. In addition to the above, they have another kind of armor, which they occasionally wear in place of the leathern shirt. It is a species of corset formed of thin slips of hard wood, ingeniously laced together by bear grass, and is much lighter and more pliable [illegible]

[Transcribed from left margin, page 54]

The above was written before the breaking out of the existing war in which it is unnecessary to say they have displayed a hardihood and pertinacity for which credit was never given them.

[illegible] hard wood or bone, and resemble in every respect the figures in the third volume of Mr. Schoolcraft's work. They are in no respect equal in workmanship, to those of the interior or the coast of Cal-