She caused him to swell up and as he sat on Scarborough hill opened him with a knife and then converted him and his brother into rock.

The numerous lakes in the prairies between the Nisqually and the Puyallup were formerly all haunted, and were the especial resort of young men seeking the inspiration of the Shonahn. If they had been chaste, they sometimes received the afflatus. If not, the spirits destroyed them, a lake lying about five miles back of Fort Nisqually was called Nis-jug-wa (jug-wa is a fright or monster) another above Steilacoom is called the lake of the Black Hand, because from it a gigantic sable hand was seen to arise.

The Klikatats seek the tamahnous by wandering in the mountains night and day till they meet it. It may be a bird, a deer or any other object that has formerly been a Skookoom. The seeker must have been chaste, but he may take a wife afterwards. Some find the Tamahnous of becoming rich or chief; others of being doctors. The Tamahnous within the doctor tells him the nature of the disease in what part of the body it is. The doctor then seeks it out in the shape of a small object, which is black green, red &c according to its nature. This he throws to a distance.

Sometimes, though not often, women find the tamahnous of medicine. Among the Wascoes according