house such as the adobe building erected by the Spaniards.

Winapat, or as he is called by the whites Bonaparte, one of the old Snohomish chiefs informed me that the first ship came up only as far as Whidbey's Island. Until then a piece of iron as long as one's finger was worth two slaves. That ship brought it to them directly. When he was a very small boy two ships came one of which stopped in the Clallam country and the other went up to the Puyallup. They carried off a chief-Chee-chicht-on. In this also there is probably some error, if the ships were Vancouver's as he makes no mention of taking away any Indians.
