Ushis-kah and a still larger one falls into Gray's Harbor on which according to them there is fine prairie country and many horses. The whole country north of the Chihalis is known only by Indian report. and should be thoroughly examined.

About twenty five miles above it the Quin-ault. This stream also according to common accounts interlocks with the waters of Hammonds Inlet It has no entrance for vessels at its mouth and is of inconsiderable size. but the country between it and the former contains large open prairies.

Beyond the Quin-ault nothing is correctly known of the coast section nor indeed of any portion of the district lying between Woods Canal and the Pacific.

The mountains of Vancouvers Island and Queen Charlottes Islands are part of the exterior wall. A glance at the map indicates the main land opposite them is land of the same geological features that exists upon the Sound. The Olympian range of mountains of the Olympian range is evidently formed. but another range is found which bounds the prairies lying upon the Cowlitz. The Chihalis was elevated at the same time with the present shores of those arms of the sea & probably influenced its similar course. The wash of the mountains has filled them up, and the bottoms
