After the paragraph concluding "Olympia can easily be connected with Port Gamble" add.

"The Mountains lying ~~was~~ between Hood's Canal & the Ocean to the whole of which the name of Olympic range has been given are of perhaps a greater average height than the Cascades - excluding the Snow Peaks. Some of them are within the Snow range, as the principal point ~~given~~ called ~~designated~~ Mount Olympus, the height of which Capt Wilkes places at 8138 feet. This however is not like the Snow peaks of the Cascades distinct and alone above the rest, but is hardly distinguishable from the mass of the mountains around, nor does it ~~has~~ present the appearance of having formerly been like them, a Volcano.
