removed to the Orphan Asylum buildings, about a mile out on the Hamtramck River Road, a very inconvenient and out of the way place. The building is very incapable to accommodate the office as they have left a vast quantity of books and papers in the Treasury & Interior Departments but it is not a sturdy one and there is some danger in putting the Library in the third story. The old building is to come down and make way for the Treasury extension - Where they will ultimately put the State Department I dont know -

Mr Corcoran cannot get possession of his Art building, although the government pay him rent for it now. So until the end war
