"language of foreign Courts" as much as she did, much the practical experience of the last ten years. I am sorry that we are not to have the pleasure of a visit from Mrs Wilkes this summer. I was afraid that Mrs Wilkes would not stand the fatigue of the journey, but I thought that by taking only a days journey at a time she would be able to make it without much fatigue, and as she has never been out West would have so much to see that she would be fully compensated for her trouble. George too has been unable to break up his business in Washington and go out to New Mexico. I don't know how good his prospects were there, but it seems to me that kind of office duty in Washington does not lead to any thing in the way of such an independence or a competence, and is just about what he has been at, for the past twenty years. Every one of the family I suppose is looking forward to a summer campaign somewhere and all over the United States this year than
