and a full & minute developement, of all my Official Transactions in Connecticut.

~~When the~~ These services recommended me, to Him who who is justly stated the Father of his Country, and on the first organization of the ~~existing Constitution of the United States~~ Department of the Treasury, under the existing Constitution of the United States, I was appointed to Auditor of that Department, in the summer of 1789. with an annually Salary of Fifteen hundred Dollars.

Labours analogous to those, which I had performed in Connecticut, were then to be resumed, in a ~~[illegible]~~ National Scale. The duties which had been transacted by the Boards of the Pay Office Commissary, Quarter Master, Pay Master, Naval, Cloathing, & Foreign Departments, under the former arrangements of Congress, were all transferred to & concentred in my Office; By the selection of able & experienced Clerks, I was enabled to reduce to order & compass, the vast mass of Affairs ~~and business~~ which the inefficiency of the Confederation had accumulated. On the decease of the first Comptroller, I was advanced, without any solicitation on my part, to the vacant Station, in June 1791.

The official forms by which all accounts, of receipts, and expeditures are regulated, recorded and preserved; by law required to be by the Comptroller of the Treasury are devised ~~in that Office~~. By the establishment of the Funding System, and the assumption of the revolutionary debts of the States, the great variety of claims ~~and demands~~, which existed in Bills of Credit, Loan Office, & Liquidated Debts, & Evidences of debts which were then transferrible by delivery, were ~~of course~~ to be reviewed, adapted to new modes of alienation, and placed on record. It was necessary to accomplish this purpose, in a manner compatible, with the public security; with complete information, to be at all times attainable at the Treasury, and at the same time, to reconcile the new System, with a facile & safe modes of
