Gibbs,", in Mr. G. A. Gibbs' possession,-I see the name "James" recurring at a later date among "Matthew's" descendants.

As further conclusive evidence, Mr. G. A. Gibbs showed his family coat of arms in a careful pen drawing. It is identical with ours, the shield bearing three battle axes, & the crest being the bent mailed arm holding a battle axe.

Mr. G. A. Gibbs told me that the Maine branch of the family, Jonathan Gibbs' descendants, had the genealogy of their branch; but he had only the genealogy of the Matthew Gibbs branch.

I think it likely that considerable more information could be got by enquiry among the Maine Gibbses & Massachusetts Gibbses, & also, in Venton, England.

I find in the map of England that Darlington is now a town in county Durham, just north of York, & near the river Tees. Latitude 54° 31' & longitude 1° 37' W. I can not find Venton on the map."
